
Arrays of "frui-quettes" (baskets or boquettes made of fresh fruits) were also on display at the shop during the event. Our very own chef Justo Rodrigo also prepared the Iberian pork brochettes with nectarines. They are indeed irresistible that almost all of the guests ended up asking for more. There were also pastries made with strawberries, peaches, nectarines, and kiwi that were enjoyed by everybody.

Despite the seasonal availability of these fruits, Nice Fruit delivers them all-year round. Not only is Nice Fruit set to create a radical shift in the way food is exported, stocked, and consumed, but also how its taste is fully maximized. And while Del Monte has enjoyed its reputation as a distinguished heritage brand, it welcomes the modern consumer to the future of food.

frozen fruity freshness

Over the years, Del Monte in the Philippines has consistently provided the Filipinos with a wide range of healthy recipes, foods, and beverages. Its owner, Del Monte Pacific Limited has partnered with Spain's Nice Fruit, a global company engaged in the production and distribution of frozen fruits and vegetables.

In the recent launch of Nice Fruit in Txanton, it aimed to give emphasis not only to provide convenience and ease in operation, but also to allow access to fruits which are not regularly accessible in the Philippines–at a quality which is even better than fresh fruits. In fact, Manila's top pastry chef Jackie Ang Po, has joined the Nice Fruit revolution. Even various restaurateurs, pastry chefs, airline caterers alike were indeed happy about it because they now have an easier way of preparing flavourful dishes without sacrificing quality and taste.

Ever heard about IQF (Individual Quick Frozen)? It is an incredible process that allows us to freeze fruit at its optimal ripeness so we can enjoy it whenever we want when thawed. That's why when we had the chance to taste some of the frozen fruits, it tasted as if it were indeed freshly picked.
